The Current Braille Code: Unified English Braille (UEB)

In November 2012, the Braille Authority of North America (BANA) voted to adopt the Unified English Braille Code (UEB) as the official code for the United States. We then joined several other countries who adopted UEB before us. The new code was implemented in the U.S. on January 4, 2016 and since then, we have converted over 700 of our books to UEB, making Seedlings a leader in UEB books for children.

We started with our books for younger children (please see Page 3) and have worked our way up to our popular big books for older children and teens. Some of the bigger books are still be available in the old code (EBAE), and they are listed on our website (seedlings.org).

For more information on UEB see: www.brailleauthority.org

Just as we have in the past, the Seedlings staff will continue to work hard to give you high-quality, low-cost children’s books in braille!

Uncontracted vs Contracted Braille

Uncontracted Braille is the simplest form of braille. It consists of a symbol for each letter of the alphabet and a few for punctuation. In Contracted Braille, several dozen special symbols (contractions and short forms) were added to make the books shorter and faster to read.

SEEDLINGS’ COMMITMENT TO DIVERSITY

From the beginning of Seedlings’ history, our work and mission have been based on a belief in the value, dignity, and equal rights of all people. We are particularly dedicated to leveling the playing field in terms of access to books and literacy for children with vision loss.

Throughout our history, we have selected books to transcribe into braille that include themes of peace and justice, and that have positive portrayals of people from different backgrounds, ethnicity, and abilities.

To see some of the books that reflect this commitment, go to: www.seedlings.org/diversity.php

Seedlings Braille Books for Children is a nonprofit that has been sowing the seeds of literacy and opening doors to education and independence for children with vision loss around the world since 1984!

“My daughter’s name is ZZ and she is 10 years old. ZZ loves to read and won an Accelerated Reader (AR) award for her class this year. ZZ loves Seedlings books because she can choose stories she’s heard of and is interested in reading. I love them because they ship straight to our door and we do not have many local resources for braille.”

After receiving lots of new books through Seedlings’ programs, the mother of Shawn, age 2, wrote: “This is an amazing gift!! Thank you so much for instilling the love of books and reading for all kiddos. Thank you for all that Seedlings does!”

“Hello! This is Emma, my 13 year old daughter who loves to read. She would read all day long and half the night if I would let her. She loves Seedlings Braille Books because she has been able to find a wide variety of genres through Seedlings to feed her unending thirst for knowledge. Emma aspires to be an astronaut for NASA when she grows up.”
